The Master's Programme in Craft is based on artistic exploration through materials and concepts. Through artistic methods the student gains a deeper understanding of material, skill-based knowledge, execution of artistic work and investigates the material and conceptual identity of Craft based on the students' own artistic inquiries within their chosen specialisation Ceramic Art, Jewellery Art or Textile Art.

During the first semester the student is introduced to various tools and methods with the aim of identifying their own area of interest within their chosen subject specialisation. The student is given the opportunity to broaden their experiences through practice-based artistic research in the workshops. The student is also introduced to academic writing.

During the second semester the student realizes an in-depth artistic projects within their chosen subject specialisation and develops insight into their own working methods and artistic choices. The student develops the ability to describe, critically reflect on and contextualise their own artistic practice. Craft and the public space is examined theoretically and practically.

During the third semester the student further develops in their artistic practice and knowledge of materials, techniques and making, developing their ability to identify and apply their own contextual, ethical and aesthetic choices. The student begins work on their degree project by formulating a project plan and a theoretical basis for the independent work in parallel with the practice-based research work.

During the fourth semester the student completes the independent degree project, which includes a major artistic work, a degree report and a presentation of the project within the framework of a degree exhibition.

Elective Programme Courses

Several of the educational programmes offered at the department include compulsory elective programme courses. These courses aim to offer complementary education in artistic practices in addition to the programmes' subject specialisations.
